Rule of the Month

Imagine golf as a grand adventure, like a whimsical quest for a tiny white ball. But unlike a knight on a solo mission, you're sharing the fairways with fellow adventurers. That's where golf etiquette comes in, your guide to a smooth and cheerful journey.

These rules are like whispers of respect on the course. They remind you to be quiet when others are putting (think hushed library for the ball), and to fix your divots (like leaving a tidy campsite for the next golfer). There's also pace of play, where keeping things moving is key (no stopping for scenic naps!). Watch those peripheral views - and stand clear of the player's line of sight.

Following these whispers makes the course enjoyable for everyone. You get to appreciate the good shots (and maybe a few bad ones with a chuckle), without anyone wanting to yell "Fore!" in frustration. So, next time you're out there, think of etiquette as your compass to a fun and friendly golfing adventure!

Here's a link to a cheat sheet! Basic Golf Etiquette | 10 Essential Rules for Beginners

I expect to make at least seven mistakes a round.

So therefore, when I make a bad shot, I don't worry about it. It's just one of those seven.
